

Welcome to the City of Sammamish, WA

Deputy City Manager Position Open - Apply by February 19, 2016

Estimated Population: 60,000

Sammamish, a quiet bedroom city approximately 20 miles due east of Seattle, was simply referred to as “The Plateau” for many years. Now, Sammamish is known for being one of the most affluent cities in King County, for truly exceptional schools and for highly educated residents. It is a vibrant and diverse community that is one of the safest cities in the country. To top it off, it is surrounded by the Northwest’s fabulous scenery!

This delightful city lies along the eastern shore of Lake Sammamish and is ideally located for those interested in technology. Redmond, home to Microsoft headquarters, is eight miles northwest and Bellevue, known as the tech center of the area, is a relatively easy 25 minute commute to the west. A bit further west, although the traffic can be challenging, is Seattle.

Over the past two decades, the area surrounding Lake Sammamish has been one of the most rapidly growing in the Pacific Northwest. In 2000, the city’s population was a little over 34,000. In 2014, the Census Bureau estimated it to be just over 51,200. On January 1st the Klahanie area was added through annexation bringing the city’s population to more than 60,000.

The city of Sammamish was incorporated in August of 1999 and immediately set about changing the face of the community. It has spent $200 million on road improvements and parks upgrades, purchased 450 acres of open space, built a new city hall and will be completing a new community and aquatic center this spring. It is also creating a downtown, the Town Center, where residents can gather, shop, eat, mingle, recreate, work and live. Another $90 million in transportation improvements are planned in the next six years.

Samamish's efforts have not gone unnoticed. In 2007, Money Magazine named the city the 11th 'Best Place to Live' among small towns from coast to coast. CNN Money magazine's 2011 review of the best places to live in the United States ranked it 15th, and Forbes named it the Friendliest Town in the United States in 2012. The future definitely looks bright for this city.

The people in Samamish want the best for their community. A third of the population is under the age of 18 and many families have chosen to live here due to its two excellent school districts, Issaquah and Lake Washington. Both are ranked as 5-star plus. The market's perception of the community's quality is reflected in the median home sale price of $659,200 (per Zillow.com). The city has excellent medical facilities and a new state-of-the-art hospital is located about 10 minutes away in nearby Issaquah. Samamish is home to its own symphony and has hosted three major PGA golf tournaments at the Sahalee Country Club (1998 PGA Championship, the 2002 NEC World Golf Championship and the 2010 US Senior Open). Later this year, the KPMG Women's PGA Championship will be held at the Club.

Samamish has three significant lakes, a large portion of Lake Sammamish and Pine and Beaver Lakes, lie within its boundaries. No motorized boats are allowed on Pine Lake and Beaver Lake so they are a haven for summer swimming or playing on the beach (or dock) in a calmer environment. Lake Sammamish serves as a regional playground for boaters and swimmers, alike.

Aside from its spectacular environment, the best part of Samamish is its people. It is a diverse community where everyone values the city's small town feel, is very friendly and works to create a safe environment. You will see children walking to and from school, and riding their bikes everywhere. Residents love living here and will tell you it's the best place they have ever lived. They hasten to add that their neighbors are among the kindest on earth—reaching out to help one another without hesitation.

Just south of the city is Lake Sammamish State Park, a 512 acre day-use park with 6,858 feet of waterfront on the lake. Its many activities include rowing, waterskiing, wakeboarding/surfing, tubing and jet skiing. A popular lake event is “Pirates vs. Vikings” where participants dress in costume and participate in a massive water balloon fight between boats. A party follows on a floating dance floor. For the more naturally inclined, the park provides deciduous forest and wetland vegetation providing visitors with opportunities for hiking, birding, and exploring. A salmon-bearing creek and a great-blue-heron rookery are additional features that visitors can enjoy.

A bit further away (45 minutes) are the Cascade Mountains and there you can enjoy outdoor activities in both the summer and winter. Also relatively nearby to the west are the Puget Sound and the Olympic Mountains and to the southeast is Mount Rainier. It is one hour to skiing, two hours to the ocean and only three hours to Portland, Oregon or Vancouver, British Columbia. Needless to say, a multitude of outdoor activities surround the area that you can enjoy while still living in the temperate climate (with relatively little snow) which characterizes the Plateau of Sammamish.

In fact, Sammamish has so much to discover and enjoy that you may never choose to leave. However, should the big city beckon or the travel bug bite, Seattle is just over a half-hour (assuming no traffic) to the west! There you will find the Seattle Symphony Orchestra (which is among the nation’s most recorded), the Seattle Opera and the Pacific Northwest Ballet. Sprinkled throughout Seattle are over two dozen theater venues. For those who enjoy spectator sports, the Seahawks (of the NFL), Mariners (MLB), Sounders (MLS), and Storm (WNBA) are well known – not to mention the University of Washington and its well-respected Huskies. Seattle is also a major travel hub where you can catch flights to travel anywhere in the country, or abroad. The cruise port offers trips to Alaska and other destinations. Just remember your passport!

Although you will most likely enjoy your vacation and time away, soon you will be ready to come home. And after traveling to another city, or the other side of the world – you will probably find that everything you hoped for, and wanted, has been right here in your own backyard in hospitable, cheerful and wonderful Sammamish!

History

The Sammamish people were a Coast Salish Native American tribe in the Sammamish River Valley in central King County, Washington. Europeans from the Hudson's Bay Company arrived in the area in 1832. In 1855, the United States government signed the Treaty of Point Elliott with most of the Puget Sound tribes. Some did not accept the Treaty and after the brief Puget Sound War, the Sammamish People were relocated to reservations.

Serious settlement began on the Plateau in the 1870s and 1880s. By the 1890s logging was becoming a major industry in the area, and for many years the area was characterized by small farms, some large chicken and dairy farms, and several logging mills. By the 1930s the area was “logged out” and resorts began to develop.

The area’s real growth began in the mid-1970s and by the mid-1980s was accelerating dramatically as Seattle’s suburbs sprawled eastward. Around 1984 the Plateau’s population passed 10,000. Local residents were complaining that the growth was unchecked and King County was not providing the appropriate services. Many felt the answer was to become their own city and, in 1999, 63% of the citizens voted in favor of incorporation. Growth became more orderly and a real sense of community began to be established.

Climate

Sammamish’s climate is described as oceanic with mild wet winters and warm dry summers. The city has four distinct but relatively mild seasons. The average high in December is 45° F and 76° F in July, while the average low varies from 34° in December to 54° in July. The city experiences approximately 200 cloudy days a year and is partly cloudy for another 90+ days. The area’s reputation for rainy days comes from the frequency (it rains on average a little over 150 days per year) and not the total accumulated rainfall. In fact, its annual average precipitation is approximately 35 inches, less rain than what is received in New York (50 inches), Atlanta (50 inches), or Chicago (39 inches).

Geography

Sammamish covers 24 square miles. The city is located on the east bank of Lake Sammamish and sits on a plateau about 450 feet above sea level. Seattle is approximately 20 miles to the west. The city features a landscape of trees and lakes (Lake Sammamish, Beaver Lake and Pine Lake). Mountains are easily viewed in the distance on a clear day.

Demographics

Sammamish’s population was 45,780 per the 2010 Census. With the annexation of the Klahanie area on January 1, 2016, it has risen to more than 60,000. The median household income was recently estimated to be $169,859. The per capita income for the city was $55,550. According to the 2010 Census the city had 15,546 households, and 12,918 families residing within its boundaries. The population density is 2,512.6 inhabitants per square mile. (See page 4 for Table 1: Sammamish Demographics.)

Sammamish has a very small commercial base (see Table 2: Sammamish Principal Employers, on page 4) and is primarily a residential community. Its population generally commutes to employment in nearby cities and often works in high tech.

Sammamish’s unemployment rate tends to be about half the national average and the Bureau of Labor Statistic reported it to be 2.9% in April 2015.

The Government

Sammamish operates under the Council-Manager form of government, with a seven member City Council. They are elected at-large and serve staggered four year terms. The Mayor and Deputy Mayor are selected by the Council from among its members. The Council sets policy and appoints the City Manager and City Attorney (currently provided through a contract with a local municipal law firm). It also appoints members to advisory boards. Since incorporation, the City Council has been very stable. Although the members have their own ideas and opinions, they get along reasonably well. Its members believe strongly in transparency and being a regional leader. They have a high regard for City Staff. The current City Manager has been with the City for more than 15 years. He will retire at the end of February and will be replaced by the current Deputy City Manager who has also been with the City for roughly 15 years.

The City has a total expenditure 2015/2016 biennial budget of $188.9 million and a general fund expenditure budget of $87 million. It believes strongly in lean government and the budget for 2016 calls for only 90 full time equivalent employees (FTE) spread over five departments: Administrative Services, Community Development, Financial & Technology Services, Parks & Recreation and Public Works. Police services are provided via contract with King County Sheriff's Office and Fire Rescue is provided through an independent special consortium, Eastside Fire & Rescue. Water and sewer services are provided by two independent special districts. The City does not have any bargaining units representing its employees.

The City compensates its staff well and expects a great deal. Staff members pride themselves on working as a team.

They are very collaborative, collegial and cooperative. They also strive to support each other and do not tolerate silos. In many ways, that has been the key to the City's success. Resources can be placed where they need to be when they need to be there.

The City places a very high priority on meeting its residents' needs and conducts a biennial citizens' satisfaction survey. The most recent results (2014) were extremely positive. Nearly eight in ten residents agreed the City was "on the right track." Seven in ten were satisfied with the leadership of city government. Three in four survey participants were satisfied with management of the City's finances. Nearly three in four agreed the City is "making good progress" on road improvements and nine in ten rated neighborhood streets as "excellent" or "good." Virtually everyone said they feel safe in their homes and neighborhoods. Needless to say, Sammamish's residents are very happy overall with the City and its government.

The Ideal Candidate

The City is seeking an outstanding leader and manager to assist the City Manager in overseeing the City's operations. The individual will have high energy and be committed. The environment is very fast paced and demanding. The City values creativity and the staff is very bright so the next Deputy City Manager (DCM) will need to be agile and adapt quickly to new ideas and situations. An entrepreneurial spirit will be important. Sammamish prides itself on being a lean organization which means the individual will need to think outside the box and be very comfortable doing the work, not just directing traffic from behind a desk. There are no silos here, so plan to foster a collaborative, problem-solving environment.

The DCM will be confident, bold, tenacious, proactive and relentlessly positive. The individual will also be a team builder and mentor and value staff participation. To the degree possible, he/she will involve others in the decision making process realizing input from others leads to better decisions, helps with buy-in and is an important part of staff development. At the same time, the individual will be very comfortable making decisions within the scope of their duties and keeping the City Manager informed.

Optimism will be a key characteristic of the new DCM. The environment is positive and the attitude is "can do." The City is looking for someone who sees issues as hurdles rather than barriers and who is always looking for an improved, more effective and efficient way to get things done. The individual will see better ways to accomplish the City's goals and ask, "Here is the ideal. Why not?" instead of, "Here is how we are doing it. How can we make it better?"

The ideal candidate will have direct experience with all lines of local government business and be prepared – if need be – to fill in for department directors when positions are vacant. The ideal candidate will be an excellent communicator (both oral and written) and comfortable in dealing with people from all walks of life. The individual will be extremely responsive. Sammamish is a particularly high-end community that expects outstanding service. When a resident arrives with a problem, the DCM will listen carefully. If, what the customer wants cannot be done, the DCM will take the time to explain why and, ideally, suggest other possible alternatives that will achieve the same end.

The staff is very knowledgeable and capable. As a result, the best candidate will be someone who is not a micromanager – there is not enough time for that – but rather someone who sets high standards, expects to be kept informed and requires accountability. The individual will also realize that while it is important to conduct the City’s business with excellence, it is also important to take time from the day-to-day operations to think about the future. Being a strategic thinker will be critical.

The DCM will have a high degree of integrity, meaning the individual will say what they will do and then do what they say. Honesty and a strong belief in transparency will be critical. The City is also seeking someone with an appropriate degree of impatience with bureaucracy. Rules are important but must be reasonably designed to meet the needs of the entire community.

The ideal candidate will have a demonstrated track record of achievement, extensive knowledge of city and municipal operations and a strong understanding of municipal finance and budgeting. The individual will have a Bachelor’s degree in Public Administration, Business Management, Accounting or a related field. A Master’s degree is preferred as well as at least seven years of progressively responsible work in city government.

Compensation

The salary range is $120,034 to $187,376. While the salary will depend on qualifications, the City will pay in the upper end of the range to get the right person. Benefits are excellent and the Director will be part of the Washington Public Employees Retirement System.

The Most Recent Deputy City Manager

The most recent Deputy City Manager will be promoted to City Manager upon the City Manager’s retirement.

Residency

Residency within the city limits is not required or expected.

How to Apply

E-mail your resume to Recruit34@cb-asso.com by February 19, 2016. Faxed and mailed resumes will not be considered. Questions should be directed to Colin Baenziger at (561) 707-3537 or David Collier at (772) 260-1858.
